The Mason and Dixon Line.

The Mason and Dixon line runs along the parallel of latitude 39 degs. 43 min., 26 degs. 3 min., separating Pennsylvania from Maryland. It was drawn by two distinguished English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, who began their work in 1763 and finished it in 1767. The line is marked by stones set at intervals of five miles, each having the arms of Lord Baltimore engraved upon one side and those of the Penn family upon the other. Besides these large stones set to mark each fifth mile, smaller stones were set at the end of each mile, these having a large P engraved upon one side and the letter M on the other—these intended as initial letters of Pennsylvania and Maryland.

All of these stones were engraved in England. The Mason and Dixon line was not the line separating the free and the slave States. The line settled on in the compromise of 1820 was 36 degs. 30 min. The Mason and Dixon line, as shown above, runs along the parallel of 39 degs. 43 min.—St. Louis Republic.

Between the cost of a good piano and a poor one. But there is the easiest thing to make. It's the real heart of the instrument, the tone and touch, that makes the difference. When we show you a piano we dissect it. We show you beyond question just why the STEINWAY, GABLER, HARDMAN, VOSE, and STERLING excel, each in its own way.
